"For the whole of the first half of the game I'd been having fun running through the forest trying to avoid the sneaky wolves and bandits, but once the second half of the game starts things get a bit messy. You wake up in a forest on a muddy hill with a wolf luring you over a cliff and the bodies of your friends littering the ground ahead. Finding them as you run off the cliff and into the dark valley below is like a jaw-dropping moment. It's one of the more interesting parts of the game. The way the camera creeps around as you walk around definitely makes it seem like the kind of game where things could change at any time." Game Score:8.6 8.6/10 Game "Who Must Die" Tips: *

Avoid direct conflicts in combat, it'll lead to bad things. * Make sure you have at least a few different weapons. * Don't rely on your friends. You don't know what you're going to find if you do this. Gameplay: The gameplay is slow. First I was just walking around the map looking at everything, collecting weapons, running away from wolves and bandits, and then making a camp in the middle of the forest. It felt like I was playing a puzzle game with lots of fun unlockables. But a couple of moments reminded me of what Kind of Game it was, mostly from Skyrim. There were so many things to do, I loved every second. If you're looking for a fast paced combat/RPG then this isn't it. However, it's not as slow as Skyrim. I get bored very fast in Skyrim and it can take me a few hours to finish a single quest, which I rarely do and can end up getting really frustrated. This game has a very slow pace. The areas you go to are fixed, you can't jump up, you can't climb up a ladder, you can't walk through thick walls. You have to go slowly to do stuff. And some stuff you can do by going under the terrain like in Skyrim, like climbing up, jumping down, getting on top of a bridge. But there's also a fair bit of climbing. You go into caves, you climb the side of cliffs, you swim in lakes and rivers, which makes it more similar to an RPG. You can get your quests done in this game, but the way to complete them is very... hand-holding. You do so by talking to people. It is a rising star in the elite Pokemon Go hacking community. She has outmaneuvered her cellmates at San Quentin State Prison to acquire unrivaled authority over an ever growing legion of other inmates who she has brought together for her cause. At her most base, her worldview is summed up like so, "Bunnies are Here," and, "Bunnies are Just Fine." Ms. Bunny is, with a little bit of prodding, finally coming to a point in her life where she is on the precipice of outgrowing this awkward addiction. She's spent years coexisting with an invasive, digital Pokemon that has over the past half decade or more she's been hooked (as one of her fellow convicts put it, "she as played it all out of the big round thing") has hijacked her life but now she finally senses it is on her horizon that she is past the heyday of Pokemon Go as a game, a good friend and confidant and a monetary driver. Bunny is riding her last wave of artistic success, it's about time she start to learn to wave a white flag and acknowledge she's out, but she is not done on the battlefield for the cause she has voluntarily dedicated her life too and now is the time for her to buckle down and start to work for a truce. She has been at war with her own best friend and that friend being her intellect and intellect alone now is time for them to finally call a truce and agree on how they are going to live their lives on a daily basis, write their memoirs and make them right, meaning to themselves and to others. Bunny is a specter. A ghost. She is ever present at her home and seems to be a bit of a loner until she abruptly comes around a corner on her way home when she sees a small red motorcycle shooting down the street being driven by none other than her childhood idol, Harvey Bonecutter. He is drunk and bunny is taken aback seeing the two of them in a confrontation that has her thinking of turning her bicycle around and riding back to the prison to see what her fellow convicts would think. Harvey, who has a history of only causing trouble and in episodes of misdeeds, is acting all hinky as he rolls up in front of her, all fangs, malice and rage on his face. He stops and looks her up and down like she'
